Megan Coyle

- Megan Coyle is an American collage artist who was born in Northern Virginia. She is known for making collages entirely from magazine strips.
- Growing up, she took an art class just about every year in school.
- In college she continued to make collages in her free time. For her senior year, she created her first series of collage portraits that were made entirely from magazine strips!
- Megan Coyle now enjoys it when people think her collages are paintings. She likes it when they step closer to her work to get a better look once they realise it's not made with paint, but layered paper. Taking something ordinary like magazines to make something unexpected like a work of art.
